Vale sadly announces the death of Roger Agnelli

It is with deepest sympathy that Vale has received news of the death of Roger Agnelli, who was CEO of the company between July 2001 and May 2011

It is with deepest sympathy that Vale has received news of the death of Roger Agnelli, 56, who was president and CEO of the company between July 2001 and May 2011. He died on Saturday, March 19th. The company and its employees extend their sympathies to the family and friends of the executive, who contributed so much to the development of our company. During the 10 years that Roger presided over Vale, the company established itself as the largest global producer of iron ore and the second largest mining company in the world. It was during his tenure that Vale increased its global expansion strategy, which took Vale to new levels in the global mining market.
